— Been Thinking About Dogs —

For our less-perceptive readers, this is from the classic satirical perspective.

Been thinking about dogs. Yeah, dogs...and the observable differences there are in the various breeds of dogs. There are cute dogs and ugly dogs. Got macho dogs and sissy dogs. Some breeds like to play. Some even love to work. Some just wanna eat, pee, poop and sleep.

For a few breeds, high intelligence is the observable norm and exceptional athletic ability is common in others. Only a few breeds are characterized by both. Some breeds are sweet and some are mean. Among those that are highly regarded as companions are those that like to cuddle and those that are full of glee when their humans return even after short times of absence. And then there are those breeds that will bite the faces off of the human caretakers who consistently provide everything they need to survive – and even to thrive – in their environments.

Been thinking about people, too. Yeah, humans...and the easily observed differences there are in the various breeds of'em...
